Don’t wait to call. Many legal problems are made worse when people delay getting help.

Get your documents and facts together before you call. The Advice and Hotline staff will be able to give you better advice if you have specific and correct information.

- Wills
- Powers of Attorney
- Domestic Violence issues, including protection orders

What to Expect

Our staff will try to take your call right away. If all Advice and Hotline staff are busy, someone will call you back. Please have a call back number ready when you call.

You will be asked some questions (our intake process) before you can speak with an attorney. The Senior Hotline can only help people with income and assets within certain guidelines. You will be asked about all of your income and assets. We also ask other personal questions such as address, telephone number, marital status, age, and where you live. All information is protected by the attorney/client privilege and will not be shared or sold.

Next the Advice and Hotline staff will ask you to describe your problem or question in detail. They may ask you questions to better understand your situation.

Our staff will decide how best to assist you. Depending on your unique situation, here is what you might expect:

- Legal advice over the telephone
- More detailed information sent to you by mail
- Brief service (e.g., limited legal research)
- Referral to a staff or volunteer attorney for legal representation
- Referral to other agencies
- Referral to a private attorney for advice or representation

Call when you won’t be distracted. You will get the most out of the call if the TV is turned off and the children are safely somewhere else so you can focus. Allow enough time. The Advice and Hotline staff will give you as much time as your problem requires.

Avoid calling from a cell phone, if possible. If you are cut off, you may have to answer the same questions again.

Do not take another call or ask the Advice and Hotline staff to hold. Staff is limited and there are many people needing help. Please be courteous of the Advice and Hotline staff’s time.

Have your documents in front of you. Our Advice and Hotline staff cannot give you sound advice without complete and correct information.

Have a pen and paper handy when you call. The Advice and Hotline staff may give you instructions over the telephone. Don’t hesitate to ask questions and repeat instructions so you will know what to do later.

Follow instructions. The Advice and Hotline staff may explain how to do something. If you don’t follow the instructions you are given, it isn’t likely that you will get the result you desire.

You may not get the result you want. Sometimes, the Advice and Hotline attorney will tell you there is no legal remedy to your problem or your case is too weak to proceed. Please be understanding and respectful.
